CONTEXT

Veterinary Services (VS) in accordance with OIE international standards and based on the principles of good veterinary governance contribute to an effective and sustainable global system that meets the current and future health needs of society. They should have the capacity and resources to respond, in particular, to natural, accidental or deliberate spread of pathogens, and be able to implement surveillance, early detection, rapid response and biosecurity measures. Effective VS are thus a global public good, contributing to veterinary public health, food safety and security, and poverty reduction.
